

Editorial from NEJM, 9/13/21

“Striving for Diversity in Research Studies”

- Identifies a central problem of research patients being non-representative of total population
- NEJM admits to not focusing on diverse study groups enough
- Identifies a number of potential barriers to participation and considers some remedies
- NEJM will require supplementary table summarizing the disease being studied and whether study group is representative
- Emphasizes need to include diversity in study planning